A PACIFIC RAILWAY
GOLD LOAN
$6,500,000.
We have leave to announce that we have accepted the agency of the Kansas Pacific Railway Company,
For the sale of its
New Seven Per Cent.
Thirty Year Gold Loan, Free from Tax.
This Loan is secured by a First Mortgage on the Road, and by Government Land Grant of Three Million Acres, which, at the price at which the Company offer their lands, is equal to Six Hundred Dollars per Acre.
Land in Special Operation for 437 Miles West of the Missouri River, and earning already enough to pay all of the expenses of running the entire line of road.
We think the Interest upon the New Loan, in addition to the Funds now in course of payment, is secured by the Land Grant Mortgage of the GOVERNMENT LAND GRANT OF THREE MILLION ACRES, extending in Alternate sections on either side of the track, from the 38th mile west in Kansas, to Denver City, and thence proceeding, if the only of the lands are to be surveyed by the Government, 7 miles on each side of the road, or 14 miles in all.
A Sinking Fund for the Redemption of the Bonds.
The Road is now open for business for a distance of 150 miles from the Missouri River, through the Garden Spot of Kansas, and the Government Land Office is located at Junction City, in the heart of the settlement.
Three Millions of Acres in the State of Kansas, and although not pledged as a security for this Loan, they are, nevertheless, the property of the Company, and form a valuable adjunct to the Company's wealth and credit. We estimate the Value of the Company's Property covered by this Mortgage, at $23,000,000 net, while the Loan is merely $6,500,000.
The Bonds have
THIRTY YEARS TO RUN,
From May 1, 1869, and will run
Seven per Cent. Interest in Gold, semi-annually, on May 1 and Nov. 1, and are Free from Government Taxation,
The Company pay the tax.
The principal of the Loan is made payable in Gold, in the City of New York, but coupon bonds will be Payable in Frankfort, London or New York, at option of the holder, without notice, at the following rates:
On $1,000 Bond in New York, $30 (gold) each half year.
On $500 Bond in London, $27 66 to one half year.
On $500 Bond in Frankfort, $27 66 to one half year.
The Agents of the Loan, before accepting the trust bond the condition of the Road, and the country through which it runs, carefully examined, and have found it to give the loan an emphatic indorsement as a
FIRST CLASS INVESTMENT,
In every respect perfectly sure, and in some contingencies even Better than Government Securities.
The Bonds will be sold for the present at 96, and accrued interest, both in Currency.
The Agents reserve the right to advance the price without notice.
The attention of capitalists is invited to these well secured bonds, which we recommend as one of the most profitable investments in the market.
Gold and Government Securities taken in payment at their highest value, without commission.
Pamphlets, with maps giving full information, sent on application.

CABLE NEWS

London, Aug. 30.—The Times in Manchester cotton trade reports says it is admitted that the estimate of sales of cotton at Liverpool were falsified every day last week. The figures really amount but little more than half those given to the public. As a result, there is something like a panic at Manchester, and for the present all confidence is lost in the trade of the return from Liverpool. There is no disposition to do business under any pretext on the faith of buyers.

Singular Freak of a Drove of Cattle

BERRALS, Aug. 30.

A drove of 90 head of Texas cattle, which had been landed from the Intercontinental boat stampeded and ran through the street at a fearful rate, tearing and trampling every thing in their way. One cart was run over by a mad bull, into Niagara River. A woman was fatally gored by a bull. A number of persons were more or less injured. Five or six of the cattle were shot by citizens. Some of them swam Niagara River and scented for Canada side. Others are still running in the suburbs. Had the stampede taken place at any other hour of the day, when crowds of persons would have been in the streets, the casualties would have been fearful.

Class Conventions.

Republican Conventions, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Representatives to the Legislature, will be holden as follows: In class composed of Bradford, Charleston and Levingrove, at Town House, Bradford, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, Sept. 4, at 2 o'clock.

Alton Corinth, Hudson and Kedesdeag, at School House, Hudson Village, on SATURDAY, Sept. 4th, at 2 o'clock P. M.

Milford, Bradley, Eddington, Holden, Clifton and Greenbush, at Eddington Bend, on Saturday, Sept. 4th, at two o'clock P. M.

Enfield, Lincoln, Burlington, Greenfield, &c., at Passadumkeag, on MONDAY, Sept. 6th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Hermon, Carmel, and Legend, Town House, Hermon, on TUESDAY, Sept. 7th, at 2 o'clock P. M. Each town entitled to ten delegates.

With singular consistency the Hichborn party in Kennebec seem to have laid aside the mainspring of their party action; they subordinate the temperance cause to that of anti-banging. Their whole County ticket is made up on this issue, and their nominees take pains to represent no other especially. This illustrates what we term a failure to concentrate upon any one idea, although the mainspring of the party was one idea only. Can the Gardiner Journal now comprehend that a party may spring from one idea and then fail to concentrate upon it, in order to satisfy the diversified demands of its followers? This is what the Kennebec Hichborrites have done; and this is where that party makes its most lamentable failure. Lacking exclusive right to the temperance cause, and lacking the power to control any large proportion of votes upon that question, they adopt other issues, among the most unreasonable of which is this of capital punishment. We say unreasonable, for the reason first, that no political party can expect to stand solely upon such a question, and secondly, because a very large proportion of the Republican party and many in the Democratic party are of the same belief as these men who assume peculiar championship for anti-capital punishment. Of course there are men in all parties who complain at the action of any party upon these questions, and the weakness of the Hichborn party is that it comprises for the most part men who are actuated by very different and even contrary ideas, which have cohesive power sufficient to hold them together barely for one campaign. When this campaign is closed, the members thereof will be strangers to each other, as their transient mission will have been performed to the satisfaction of nobody.

The Riverside Echo fraternally takes the hand of the Democratic press in misrepresenting the strength and spirit of the Hichborn movement. Both allies assert that the Hichborn County Conventions have been well attended and enthusiastic, while the Democrats make particular effort to show that the Republican Conventions are spiritless affairs. Now of the half dozen Hichborn Conventions that have been held, the largest one was composed of six members. One had 21, another 5, and still another had the low figure of 3 members. There has been an especial effort to magnify the Penobscot Hichborn Convention. We are willing that they should have all credit due them, but the truth will not allow us to say that there were fifty members in the assembly which took part, and as for enthusiasm, there was positively none, except when one or two speakers abused the Republican party. The resolutions and the nominations fell flat and coldly upon the delegates. On the contrary the Republican Convention the next day which these men attempt to belittle, filled City Hall, and its proceedings were enlivened by much pleasant enthusiasm.

Now we submit that while this system of extra puffery for a time cause may help it temporarily, it cannot be of permanent good, and is not in keeping with the professions of men who claim much extra purification. We expect the Democratic papers to misrepresent the relative strength of the parties, but we did hope better things of those who have left us because of their superior morals. The plain fact is that the Hichborn Conventions, although "mass" meetings, have been poorly attended and dull affairs. We say this not in any sense of ill feeling, but because it is the truth, and because not to attempt to whitewash the movement can cover up the dark prospect of a party which is emphatically unenthusiastic for the reason it is fighting its friends and giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says that letters received there from Congressmen and other prominent persons in different sections of the country indicate that the influence of the recent Labor Convention in Philadelphia will exhibit itself in the future movements of both parties. The Republicans generally claim that they have an advantage over the Democracy in respect to the matter of the reduction of the public debt interest, because they are able to prove by the record of the late Administration that President Johnson pocketed the bill passed by both Houses for the funding of our Government bonds.

UNPOPULARITY OF EX-PRESIDENT JOHNSON. When Andrew Johnson was President of the United States he claimed to be the especial champion of the South, and the people of this section flattered him so long as they could use him. Their papers are now, however, beginning to express their true sentiments, and great uneasiness is manifested at the possibility of his election to the Senate of the United States from Tennessee. The leading Conservative paper of his own State have denounced him in the most bitter language, and their views are indorsed by other Southern journals. The Richmond Whig speaks editorially of the possibility of his return to the Senate as follows:

"The poor South has had enough of his support and would gladly be delivered of it forever more. The mere apprehension of his return to the councils of the country is even now affecting injuriously the interests of the Southern States. No doubt many persons, smarting under a sense of the indignities and opprobrium heaped upon the South, would relish the coarse and bitter diatribes which the ex-President would launch upon the heads of guilty parties; but the pleasure would be momentary—the injury lasting. Apart from the utter impotency of Mr Johnson for any public good, we confess that we cannot forget that, as President, he was eager to have [punished?] General Lee and other Confederate Generals, and would have succeeded but for the firm and stern interposition of General Grant, who shielded them with his name and sword. We have more faith in the ability and willingness of the latter to aid us than we have in Mr. Andy Johnson. Neither can we forget the part imputed to him in the most infamous affair in our annals—the murder of Mrs. Surratt. Our only prayer so far as Mr. Johnson is concerned, is that we may be delivered of him for good and all."

In another part of the article the Whig describes Mr. Johnson as "the very quintessence of malignancy, which grows in intensity with growing years, and which, being master of the whole vocabulary of black guardism, he pours forth in resistless torrents."

More Spanish Barbarities.

Some facts have just come to light which reveal the continued outrages being practiced upon the Cubans by the Spanish authorities. It seems that not even the united remonstrances of the civilized world can stay the infernal assassinations of the Spaniards and the volunteers, so called. The latest outrages are attributed to one of the Spanish Captains, named Palacios, and they were not fully credited till it was known that Palacios was to be sent off to Spain by the Captain-General.

The facts in the affair are briefly these: On the 20th of June last, two respectable physicians of Santiago de Cuba, named Jose Antonio Perez, and Rafael Espinar, a lawyer, Gonzalo de Villar, and several planters were thrown into prison, on suspicion of being members of the Revolutionary Committee of that city. Here they remained some 15 days. The Attorney-General for the Government announced to the Governor that there were no proofs to support the accusations, and, in a few days, all but two of the prisoners were released. Not long after this, these same parties were again put in prison by the Governor because he maintained that the order of the Captain-General gave full power for imprison upon mere suspicion. The prisoners began now to fear seriously, for their lives, especially when it was announced to them that they would be sent up to Bayamo, there to await the orders of Valmaseda. It is stated that their friends interceded with the Consuls of the United States of England, of France, and of the North German Confederation, who approached the Governor upon the subject, and begged that the prisoners might be tried there, or if sent to Bayamo, that a good, responsible officer should be sent along with them. The latter suggestion was agreed to, and in due time the men arrived at Bayamo. The prisoners then petitioned the Governor to revoke the order. He replied that it was beyond his power to revoke the order, but gave the satisfactory answer that they would be escorted from Manzanillo to Bayamo by Lieut. Col. Julian Sulzar an officer asked for by the prisoners themselves. They arrived safely at Manzanillo. There Sulzar with eight men escorted them safely to Bayamo, which once reached, they all felt greatly relieved, for they were impressed with the belief that they would be assassinated on the highway between the two places. After remaining one day only at Bayamo, Valmaseda ordered them to Jiguani for trial. They started from Bayamo with far more apprehension for their lives than they had before leaving Santiago de Cuba, for their worst fears were well grounded; the commander of the escort detailed to take them being none other than Lieut.-Col. Palacios, whose mistress is the daughter of the same Francisco Casanova who made affidavit against them. They made known their fears to several friends at Bayamo, who offered to join them on their journey. They started, but before reaching Santa Rita the soldiers fell upon them and shot them—not only murdering the prisoners, but their friends, who had accompanied them on the journey. The whole number assassinated was twenty. Col. Palacios returned to Bayamo, and reported the old story that the prisoners revolted on the road, and he had to kill them in defense. The soldiers searched their bodies, and found $1,[illegible] in money, and a number of valuable watches, which, with their baggage, became the booty of the assassins.

It seems plain that the authorities premeditated having their innocent men shot before they left Santiago. Bayamo was their proper destination, but to satisfy the foreign Consuls the Governor of Santiago had them safely escorted there. The assassination occurred on the 2d, and the letter containing the above information, as well as a copy of the petition made by the prisoners, was written in Santiago on the 7th of August, and forwarded through the United States Consulate to the Cuban Junta in New York.

The Governor General claims that his order were grossly violated, and correspondents say there is no doubt but that he would have ordered the trial of Palacios there, and most probably would have had him shot had his own position been more secure. Unfortunately His Excellency is in constant dread of the volunteers, and if rumor be true, is greatly disgusted at the state of matters.

Mrs. Stowe and Lady Byron Again.

The recent revelations of Mrs. Stowe concerning the unhappy divorce of Lord and Lady Byron have naturally elicited abundant commentary from the daily press of the country, and doubtless at this moment the English journals are discussing the truth or falsity of the main charge with more or less acumen and acrimony. In America, with a single exception, says the N. Y. Post, the daily and weekly papers have treated it from the one side or the other, in the light of dignant rejection; a few writers sustaining Mrs Stowe, but by far the larger number discrediting her statements or pointing out their inconsistency with the acknowledged facts of the Byron scandal.

The better opinion on all hands is unquestionably that, true or false, the story was not fit to be told, and the interests of morality had been better consulted by consigning the long-concealed horror to oblivion.

The single exception to which we have referred in the general line of comment is the Nation. This journal does not altogether reject the dreadful accusation against Lord Byron and the Hon. Augusta Leigh, but it convicts Mrs. Stowe of slandering the fame of Lady Byron in making her an accessory after and during the fact to the hideous guilt of brother and sister.

The Nation says:

"We were told the main facts of this history something more than ten years ago, and this we now first was told to us: At whatever time the incestuous connection between Byron and his sister may have begun, Lady Byron knew nothing of it, as we heard the story, until after the birth of her child. Some time after that event, probably about the beginning of January, 1816, Byron told her of the intrigue, saying that he had never loved any other woman than the partner of his guilt. She, naturally, supposed it to be a delusion of insanity; and it was under this impression that she consulted Dr Baillie about him, which is one of his main charges against her in his letters and in 'Don Juan.' It was while under this belief that she wrote the playful letter to Byron, after leaving him, which is also one of the counts in the indictments against her. After reaching Kirby Mallory, her father's house, she had certain proofs of the truth of what her husband had told him, from which time she left him for ever.

"Now, we do not affirm that this version of the story is absolutely authentic. We tell it as it was told to us; but most certainly it is inherently more probable than the one given by Mrs. Stowe. It is a key to the whole mystery, and the solution is greatly honorable to Lady Byron. It accounts for her silence as to the cause of the separation. Her lips were sealed as long as Mrs. Leigh lived. It accounts for her consultation with Dr. Baillie, and for her letter after leaving Byron, and before knowing that a separation was inevitable. It accounts, too, for Dr. Lushington's statements concerning her own, saying that a reconciliation was impossible, and that if such an idea should be entertained she could not professionally or otherwise take any part towards effecting it.

"All this is very different from Mrs Stowe's account that Lady Byron lived with her husband after the discovery of the revolting secret; that, indeed, she knew it throughout the whole of their conjugal intercourse; nay, if there be any meaning in the "two years of convulsive struggle," that Lord Byron confided it to her months before their marriage.

We cannot remain long in doubt as to the verity of the chief damning allegation. There must be people living in England who can settle it beyond further dispute, if it be true; and it is due to all parties and society itself that the case of Mrs. Stowe has brought the charge against the name of Lady Byron, all the knowledge that may exist with regard to it may be made known.

Our extract from the speech of yesterday and the following on the subject:

The article in the Atlantic Monthly by Mrs. Stowe, concerning Lord and Lady Byron, creates considerable excitement. The Telegraph comments on it very freely as follows: "Without further comment on the fearful story we cannot but accept it as true." The Post says, "The question remains whether, in the absence of authority, the article can be read as Lady Byron's vindication."

A pleasant incident occurred just as the President was started from the station at Nashua, N. H., Friday. Gen. Grant saw a bright little girl, apparently a border's child, and endeavoring to get to the car that stopped. The train was moving slowly away, and the child in her disappointment burst into tears. The President, in his kind way, heard, instantly pointed to her and called some one to bring her to him. The child was thought two stalwart men seized her, and holding her aloft above their heads rushed with her to the car, and the General had a kind word and a stump to embrace her with both hands, and the train bore him rapidly away.

Isn't there a little more than the suspected significance in the English journals advocating the annexation of Cuba to the United States? Is it not a singular style of settling the political disposition of Canada by England? The English papers very well know that the annexation of Cuba could at present be of very little value to us, we are united upon the annexation of Canada. Are they bringing the idea for negotiation to that end? It looks a good deal like it, and in this the English are displaying unusual wisdom, for Canada is bound to come to us, and it had better be voluntarily.

A correspondent of the New York Sun, writing from Havana under date of the 19th inst., says

"Just as I was about to close this I am informed that Zulueta, of the Volunteers, has announced that Captain General De Rodas sent his resignation to Spain by the last mail, predicated upon the refusal of Spain to reinforce the Spanish army in Cuba by withdrawing his promise to give De Rodas 10,000 more men. The volunteers are brilliant over the prospect of placing some of their officers at the head of military affairs. You may be prepared to learn at any date, one of two things—that either the volunteers will have their way by having a commander of their own selection, or Spain will pronounce against Spain and accordingly."

Apropos of the projected removal of the capital, the Louisville and Cincinnati editors continue to make the most sarcastic and severe things of each other, and of either city. The Louisville of Cincinnati, intimates that Mombert, Congress, must have pure water. Louisville Democrat immediately replies that there is in the whole world no purer water than that now in St. Louis tables; and do what you also on the new water-works, the water of St. Louis will be clear, and purer than pure. One would think from this that Louisville's Wass, concerning Congressional [illegible]. Wouldn't it be better to settle which city can offer to Congress the oldest and purest Extract of Rye? [Tribune.

In a letter to Mr. Corry, of the Cincinnati Commercial, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh says: "Mr. Vallandigham, as you say wishes a quiet canvass. He has the same quiet man to be sent for me at Hollock at night, and required of me as a friend, upon personal adjuration, to make the application (which I did make) the next morning for a writ of habeas corpus. I have read of many singular changes, but of all, those of Mr. Vallandigham and yourself fill me with most amazement."

A FOOLISH AND PERILOUS ADVENTURE.—It has been already stated that a person calling himself Professor Jenkins crossed the Niagara river at the gorge, below the falls, on the 25th inst. on a rope and on a machine of his own invention, without a propelling motion. The machine is a bicycle, and turned upside down would resemble in some degree a velocipede. The wheels, three inches wide, are made heavy and of wood, without tires, but in their place are grooves one and three-quarter inches deep. The front wheel is three feet two inches, and the hind wheel two feet ten inches in diameter. The connecting rods are iron, so also the balance-pole, which is eight feet long and loaded with ten-pound balls, and weighs 28 pounds. The whole thing, with the man, weighs 298 pounds. The propelling power is a plain cog-wheel, made of brass, about [illegible] inches in diameter, which is made to fit cogs which surround the front wheel at the bottom of the groove. The two-inch hemp cable was fastened immovably on the American shore, but on the Canada shore coiled around a windless to facilitate tightening. The deflection of the rope was about thirty feet. The machine moved slowly forward, the rope swaying gently from side to side until the rider had passed out about fifty feet, after which he crawled along at a snail's pace to the middle of the abyss, where he rose and waved his hat. From the centre to the American shore it was evidently hard work to propel the bicycle. The time occupied in passing over the rope was just eleven minutes.

A FEARFUL JUMP BY A STATE PRISONER.—CONCORD, Wednesday afternoon Officer Hall started from Fitchburg, Mass., with a fellow named Frank Francis in charge, who had just been sentenced to the State Prison for four years for pocket picking. The convict was handcuffed and sat in the smoking car by a settee from the door, the officer sitting in the seat opposite to him and talking with the conductor. All of a sudden Francis started from his seat, rushed to the door, opened it and jumped from the platform while the cars were going at the rate of forty miles an hour. The officer started and grabbed him by the coat just as he jumped, but his hold failed and the fellow got away. The cars were at once stopped and parties started in pursuit. They found the bushes and telegraph pole where he jumped all covered with blood, but though they search ed for hours they could not find the prisoner. The place where he jumped was near Lincoln, in the woods where there is a thick growth of underbrush, in which he probably secreted himself. The impression of those who searched for him, judging from the blood spilled, was that he was so badly injured that he would not live.

Personal and Political

Free trade is breaking out in spots at the West. A league has been formed at Milwaukee, which includes many of the politicians and leading business men of the city.

The Lewiston Journal earnestly protests against the nomination of a Hichborn ticket in Androscoggin County, declaring that the Republican nominees are all thorough temperance men.

Gov. Wells of Virginia asserts positively that the test oath will be exacted of members of the Legislature. He gives the information as the result of a conference with Gen. Canby. The anti-test oath men discredit the information, and say they want to hear from the President and Gen. Sherman before they place reliance on it.

An exchange furnishes the following questions for young Democrats in Pennsylvania: How did the candidate for Governor begin life? As a Packer. When did he do his first packing? When he packed his first carpet bag and packed off from Connecticut to Pennsylvania. When was his latest packing done? When he packed the Harrisburg Convention.

Speaking of John Mitchell's arrest of Gen. Dix, the Toledo Blade says it is time Congress put a stop to this prosecution of loyal men by such ex-rebels as "that infamous son of humanity, John Mitchell," who would have been hung if he had met his deserts, like other rebels "whose necks were spared by a very questionable sentiment of mercy."

The Mauch Chunk Gazette published at the home of Mr. Packer, says he is very unpopular there, even among his own party, and "from present appearances he will not carry half his party vote in the coal mines. His pettish conduct and niggardly want of hospitality toward his own county and town, have alienated very many of our citizens who have known him longest and best."

"Can a leopard change his spots?" queries the punster. "Yes," he answers himself, "if he don't like one place he can go to another." It is pretty much so with the so-called Democratic party today; for in almost every State the party has a different platform. So that if a Democrat don't like the platform of one State, all he has to do is to cross the border into another.—You say you money and take your choice.

The Chicago Post is glad to note that the Wall street operators, fully appreciating the state of penury to which her recent marriage, with Mr. Vanderbilt will subject her, have determined to make up a purse, and present Mrs. Vanderbilt with a service of silver. This is a mark of philanthropy on the part of the Wall street operators, which proverbial with the class with which they belong. They are always providing for the wants of the deserving poor.

I, John Brown, of Dexter, make the following statement for the benefit of the public:

About the third of June last, after having some sheep to scour the disease of which they died, several swellings appeared on different parts of my body, and in about nine days after the direction I became prostrate upon the bed, was examined by several physicians who remained in doubt as to the nature of my disease. I grew worse, remained without eating fourteen days under medical treatment, my friends despaired of my life, and I gave up all hope of recovery myself. At this point of time, Dr. O. Fitzgerald of Dexter, Clairvoyant, examined me, and immediately pronounced it a case of animal poison. He immediately took charge of the case, and treated me for the disease. I sat on a bench in the room, for the other room in three weeks, and in four weeks got out doors. I am now able to ride about and attend to business, have a good appetite and gain strength every day. I did not have the fullest credit for the means of my recovery, and have no doubt that I should have been a dead man in twenty-four hours, had it not been for the treatment.

A UNION MAN SUSTAINED. To those persons in this vicinity who are acquainted with Mr. D. Wardwell, of Richmond, Va., and know how much he has sacrificed and suffered among the rebels there, and that even after being appointed Superintendent of the State Penitentiary, the rebels have not ceased to abuse him, and have tried every means to have him turned out of office, it may not be uninteresting to learn that he has been entirely exonerated upon all charges brought against him. We render the following extract from the finding of the military court before which his persecutors had brought him:

"The evidence generally establishes that you have acted with energy, honesty, and fidelity; and the Commanding General desires me to inform you that the examination expressed you of any intentional offence concerning the matters alleged in the complaints against you, and no further action will be taken in the case of these headquarters.

—The Maine Farmer says that in this State alone there are four concerns engaged in the manufacture of thread spools. One at Weld, owned by Austin & Sanborn, turns out on an average, four hundred and fifty gross per day, using up four hundred cords of wood in the course of a year.

—Hon. E. F. Pillsbury, of Augusta, has lost his little boy, Bion B. Pillsbury, aged six years. This child was as well known in Augusta as any person in the place, not only for his extreme personal beauty, but for his remarkable mental qualities.

—The Farmington Chronicle says that the oat and wheat crops promise to be very large in that vicinity, and if Jack Frost withholds his blighting touch a few weeks longer, corn will come in very good. Potatoes have been greatly benefitted by the late rains, and will give a very fair yield.

—The Short Brothers have a fine schooner under way at Calais. Mr. Wm. Hinds has a schooner of 160 tons timbered out, and Mr. Owen Hinds has a schooner of 200 tons or upwards nearly planked. Mr. O. P. Rideout has also a schooner of 350 tons, nearly planked. So it will be seen ship building has not quite stopped in Calais.

—The Lewiston Journal speaks in high terms of the town of Guilford, situated in Piscataquis county, 42 miles north west of Bangor. It is watered by the Piscataquis river and its branches, and is one of the finest farming and grazing towns in the State. The soil is good, adapted to wheat and other grains, and potatoes are raised in abundance which in point of quality, are not excelled even by the Early Rose. The crops are looking well, and although the drouth and cool weather have retarded their growth there will be a fair yield. The hay crop was not quite so large as that of last season, but what it lacks in quantity it makes up in quality. This is not the bearing year for apples, but enough will be gathered for home use. Orchards are numerous and many of them in flourishing condition.

—The Oxford Democrat says that a man in Byron last eight young cattle week before last, under the following circumstances: They were in a pasture about a mile and a half from his house, and on going to them last Sunday, to give them salt, he found them all dead and no water in the pasture. They probably died from the want of water. Look out for stock in the fields and see that they have water.

—A fire was discovered in the barn of C. F. Williams, Pine street, Portland, Friday. It was only a few days ago that Mr Williams' shed was burned, and the fire was attributed to incendiaries, but Friday, when the fire was discovered in the barn, the stable boy was found in the barn in a fit, as it appeared. Soon afterwards it was found that the boy's fit was a crazy one and the supposition is now that while in a like condition of mind he must have set the other fire. The flames were extinguished with a few pails of water, says the Press.

MAINE MEN ABROAD. A correspondent of the Portland Press in Minneapolis, Minn., furnishes the following item of interest in this vicinity:

"It is not three years since the city organization took place. The first Mayor, Hon. D. Morrison, is a native of your State. He now holds the office consecrating his salary to the wants of disabled firemen, and his energy to the city's development, and prosperity, and is held in deservedly high esteem by his fellow-citizens. Last year the neighboring city of St Anthony had for a Mayor a former citizen of your State, (Winthrop Young, Esq.), formerly of Calais. Both cities contain a great many people from Maine, drawn together by the lumbering and manufacturing interests at the Falls."

DR. HAMLIN AT THE SCIENCE CONVENTION. Dr. Hamlin, of this city, read a paper before the Science Convention a few days since upon the "Gems of the United States," which is particularly interesting to readers in Maine, since it treats of the incomparably fine tourmaline found in this State. Dr Hamlin maintains that some of these stones are to be classed with the choicest gems of other countries, claiming that none exceed them in the phenomena of physical properties, or in complexity of composition, or in the vast range of their color suite, while their hardness is quite equal to that of the emeralds which their surpass in refractive power, and their dispersive energy exceeds even that of the sapphire and topaz. The tourmaline, when it resembles the topaz, emerald and sapphire, is sold for those gems. The rubellite or red tourmaline—the rarest of all gems—when free from fault and of fine color, is sold—according to the eminent authority of Prof. Bendant of Paris—at the price of the ruby, the most costly of all the gems. Mount-Mica, which is now exhausted, has yielded the finest tourmaline known. The paper was illustrated by a collection of American gems. The parure consisted of a necklace, brooch, and ear drops, containing nearly one hundred and fifty stones representing the matchless tourmaline from Maine—the red, white, blue, green, yellow and pink the variously colored sapphire of Montana, the beautiful beryl of the New England States, the gorgeous garnets of the Rocky Mountains, the turquois of New Mexico, and many other gems from different parts of our country. There is no collection of mounted native gems in the country to bear comparison with these beautiful jewels. They far exceed in value the necklace of amethysts from Ireland which belonged to Queen Caroline, or the flashing "collier" of Alexandrite which adorned the person of the beautiful Empress Josephine, or the casket of Scottish native gems presented by the Indies of Edinburg as a marriage gift to the Princess of Wales. The rarity, as well as beauty of some of the gems, render it very attractive to the mineralogist, and it is far more valuable to them (as an enthusiastic pavan exclaimed) than the necklace of brilliants given not long ago to the "incomparable Schneider" by the Prince of Wales, or the "bandeau" of emeralds presented as a New Years gift to the fair but frail Cora Pearl by Prince Napoleon.

BELFAST ITEMS. Our Belfast correspondent writes as follows: The match game of Base Ball played here Friday between the Passagassawakeags of this city and the Penobscots of Bangor did not terminate very pleasantly or satisfactorily. The Penobscots played their nine innings scoring 56 and the Belfast Club played eight innings scoring 50. At the call for the closing inning the Penobscots refused to play longer saying it was too dark. The umpire refused to so decide and subsequently awarded the game to the Belfast Club. We are very sorry that any feeling of ill will should grow out of the affair and think it will soon be forgotten and overlooked. The Penobscots may rest assured the Belfast boys entertain only the best of feelings towards them and only regret that their sudden departure prevented an opportunity for explanation.

—The County Temperance Convention was held here last Saturday. It was quite well attended. A full ticket was nominated. The following are the candidates: Senators—Dr. A. J. Billings, of Freedom, and Dr. A. W. Rich of Jackson; County Commissioner, Freeman Atwood of Montville; Treasurer, H. J. Woods Belfast. The convention was addressed by Rev. Giles Bailey of Belfast, Capt. R. Hobbs of Stockton, Dr Billings of Freedom, Hon. N. G. Hichborn and others. A series of resolutions were adopted endorsing and supporting the temperance platform and nominees for Governor made at Portland, recommending the county nominees to the suffrages of the voters in the county, "hewing adhesion" to prohibition, and calling upon all friends of temperance to vote and work for enforced prohibition.

Temperance at Northport opened with splendid weather and promises to be fully attended. Quite a number of persons were on the ground during the last days of last week, and the tents are all up and everything ready for service this Monday evening.

A heavy rain fell last Saturday from Gardiner to the crops in this vicinity. The drouth was beginning to be felt quite severely.

NATIONAL CONVENTION OF BOYS IN BLUE. The Pittsburg Gazette says that the "Boys in Blue of Pennsylvania will invite their comrades from every State in the Union to assemble in that city some time in September, to consider some of the "dead issues," and it promises that every corps, brigade and regiment which ever rallied round the old flag shall be fully represented there, from every State, and muster almost every distinguished leader

A man named James Burns, who has been an inmate of the New York Tombs for nearly a month, awaiting his trial on a charge of burglary, effected his escape last Wednesday night under somewhat remarkable circumstances. The prison being so full of crowded, Burns was placed in the extreme south-end cell, on the topmost tier in the westerly section of the male prison. The cell is about nine feet high, with a portholed window near the ceiling about six and a half inches wide and two feet long. To reach this he tore down the wooden shelf on the other side of the cell, and pressing it in between the walls underneath the window, formed a platform. He then tore up the blanket on his bed into strips, and plaited them into a strong rope. Having greased his head he forced it through the portholed window, and his body soon followed. He then drawed himself to the roof of the female prison, whence he gained the top of the outer wall, and so escaped. He hoped for evades the search which was at once instituted for him.

The Ballad of a Baker.

Joe Brown, he was a baker man,
A baker man was Joe;
He never was known to want for aught,
And yet he kneaded dough.

And he was rugged, hearty, too,
And had a long life ahead,
And all because he rose up with
His early rising yeast.

To never chant his customers
This man was early taught;
And yet his loaves were always light,
His pie-crust rather short!

And he was gen'rous hearted, too,
And kind unto the needy,
And neat and tasty in his dress,
Although his stakes were seedy.

With him none dared to handy jokes,
Whoever he sought the marts,
For well they knew his repartees
Were sharper than his tarts.

And while I say his skill was great
In getting up a muffin,
His pastry filled the mouths of all,
And needs no further puffin'.

'Tis said he was a temperate man:
True, I can't tell why
He mixed with wheat, and cornmeal too,
A little of the rye!

When age at last o'ertook the man,
His frame grew bent and sore,
And, like the cake he used to bake,
His head was frosted o'er.

And when he died all mourned his loss
With no sectarian bias
For he had been a friend to all—
A good man and a pie-ous.

HIS EPITAPH.

Beneath this crust of unleavened earth
A well-bred baker lies;
And, like the rolls he used to mould,
We hope at last he'll rise.

The Ghost of Howlit's Bridge

A strange character was that uncle of mine! Very partial to horses, and dogs, and card-playing, and fine girls, and good-living, was that uncle of mine! For he was brutal, selfish, ignorant, and vain. What exquisite pleasure it gave me when a chance offered to play a trick on that uncle of mine! How I longed to be a man that I might give him a sound thrashing! God forgive me, I cannot think of him now, when more than twenty years have passed since he was placed over me as guardian, without feeling a desire to "double him up," aye, and to giving him a series of good kicks when down. But he is dead, and—well, to satisfy good Christians, I will say "May the Lord forgive him."

That uncle of mine had been travelling on the continent and in America for some time, and the small fortune which he inherited was about completely exhausted, when he received a message from my father's executors, requesting his immediate return to Ireland. He came, had from the moment of his arrival until the day on which we were removed from his tyranny, my brothers and sisters and myself had neither peace nor plenty. I was the oldest boy, and though I was but fourteen at the time, I had the audacity to resist his outrageous conduct so boldly as I could.

You may be sure he hated me. You may swear that I did not return his hate with mock affection. Morning, noon, and night, I thought of nothing but inventing and carrying out plans for his annoyance. I shudder now at the thought of some of my acts. He was fond of hunting. I killed his best dogs. He bought a splendid bridle and saddle for his dashing gray mare. I cut the bridle into bits, and threw the saddle into the filthy dunghill. He was anxious to marry the daughter of a wealthy farmer. I told the good and kind girl what a cruel brute he was, and she would receive his attentions no longer. He had a passion for card-playing and an ardent desire for possessing his opponent's money. I would stand behind him and expose his hand. My hate knew no bounds. I feared nothing in the thought of gratifying it.

This uncle of mine was a cowardly as most bombastic fools. In the light of day he professed to despise any one who showed a disposition to believe in the existence of things supernatural, and scoffed at the idea that he should fear man or devil at any time or place. Yet, with all this boasting, I more than suspected that he was a murderous coward.

Thanks to the "Ghost of Howlit's Bridge" for exposing his cowardice. My blessing on that dear good ghost for affording me the grandest opportunity ever offered for indulging to my heart's content in the sweet luxury of revenge. I often think of you most worthy and sympathetic ghost, and wherever you may roam by day, you may rely on the kind remembrance and best wishes of one poor mortal. If you still keep watch at mid-night over the old bridge that spans one of Munster's beautiful rivers, I sincerely wish that your vigils may be undisturbed by rough tempests or uncongenial spirits.

Margaret Lawson was one of the handsomest girls in the town of——, let us call it Random. It is not safe to be too particular in telling true stories. As there were many handsome girls in this Random town of ours, I will not pretend to say that she excelled them all.

Margaret Lawson was foolish enough to fall in love with a wild, unprincipled young gentleman, who had very little means and no honor at all. Margaret Lawson's parents had sense enough to give her in marriage to a rich leather merchant, who had a fine mansion and an extensive tannery near Howlit's Bridge, about a mile from the pleasant town of Random. Margaret lived with her husband only three months, when she was silly enough to leave his fine mansion and make off with the young gentleman whom she loved too fondly. This scoundrel abandoned her in London, after taking from her whatever personal property she possessed. The husband was mad enough to follow the erring wife and bring her back to the fine mansion and to—humanity. The same husband was wicked enough to seek out the unprincipled man who had stolen his wife, invite him to a shooting excursion on a cold frosty morning, and even extended his kindness so far as to make him a present of a comfy and small lot of ground in a cemetery near Paris.

Noble, honest, high-souled tanner, this wicked world was no place for you. That glorious young wife, whom you loved so dearly and who brought shame and sorrow to your home, was a maniac now. Your care-worn face and pathetically gray hair denoted a breaking heart. Yes, men die of broken hearts. You may call it disappointed ambition, mortified pride, blasted hopes, or anything else you please. I call it dying of a broken heart, while watching and weeping over the wreck of his maniac wife.

Yet that foolish Margaret was not satisfied with falling in love with the unprincipled young man. She was not satisfied with destroying her good name, her reason and her husband's happiness and health. She must again leave the ruined home and stray down to the river's side. Standing on Howlit's Bridge, she watches the waters rushing on to the sea. These waters are rushing on through meadows and woods, by old towns and old castles, rushing on forever to the sea. She has been rushing on from folly to guilt; and now she plunges into the winsome old river, and her poor soul is hurried into the deep sea of eternity.

Two coffins are seen in the mansion of the rich tanner, and the friends and relatives take a last look on the faces of the husband and wife. The country people credit the report that the ghost of the maniac wife will appear nightly on Howlit's Bridge. Some say that the husband and the lover often accompanied her. I never saw either the husband or the lover, and, therefore, I cannot verify the assertion.

"No, nor you never saw the lady's ghost either!" Mr. Doubter exclaims.

Didn't I though. Well, all I have to say is: Listen to my story, and if you don't believe that I saw the ghost of the good tanner's wife, that good uncle of mine, whom I respected and loved so much I would swear to his dying day that he saw the "Ghost of Howlit's Bridge."

There were many handsome girls in the old town of Random. It would be hard to find an old town in Ireland of which the same could be said.

Women have been deprived of fame, and lands, and country, and even honor, but the accomodating and ever attentive Saxon cannot deprive us of the beauty of Irish girls. And proud we should be that, comparatively, so few of our maidens are as silly as poor Margaret Lawson was.

Jane O'Donovan was the daughter of a wealthy farmer, and there was not a girl in or near the town of Random—that town noted far and wide for the beauty of its girls—who could compare with her in everything that was handsome, and good, and witty, and generous. I fairly adored Jane O'Donovan. Her kind words and kindlier smiles were irresistible. Little did the farmer's beautiful daughter imagine that the young man on whom she merely bestowed the common civilities of social life looked on her with feelings almost amounting to adoration. But so it was, and so it has been through this life of mine. Through all its weary struggles and welcome changes, that bright, winsome, fair face has ever held a cherished place in my heart.

And what do you suppose that fascinating whole of mine had the impudence to do? He sought to win Jane O'Donovan for his wife. That peevish, overbearing, selfish man, with not one noble trait in his character, not one prepossessing feature on his face, with no grace or beauty in his form, had the audacity to pay court to the loveliest girl in Munster.

Pity it was that I was not a comely young man then. What a glorious triumph it would have been, could I but have won Jane O'Donovan from that hateful, unbelieved.

Ah, well, the marriage bells have been rung ere now, and Jane is the proud wife of a noble Irish farmer. That farmer may think of the Ghost of Howlit's Bridge for his good fortune. But I am very much afraid that if I mention any more people who are indebted to the ghost for the great [illegible] or their [illegible] skull for a [illegible] one good [illegible] the evil [illegible] uncle's wife.
